16 Beautiful Poems about the Sky - Poetry In Nature

“If the stars should appear one night in a thousand years, how would men believe and adore; and preserve for many generations the remembrance of the city of God which had been shown! But every night come out these envoys of beauty, and light the universe with their admonishing smile.” — Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nature and Selected Essays

Life, like lines aglow in an ever darkening sky, Like the free wind beginning to fly, Stands continuously at the very edge, A tenebrous silhouette drawn by light Aching to break the tight grip of night..... For even in the dark death of winter The fragile branch still holds the living bud of eternal spring, Only awaiting the all new life

Her Beauty, What She Is To Me, Romantic Poem

From the hushed and simmering to the nearly operatic, these poems burn bright as the cardinal that 'looked / nuclear at a distance.' They refuse to turn away from the totalizing responsibility we have toward one another: how it undoes us, how it saves us, how it goes on."
