Just know that MTG is super expensive to get into in any serious fashion, if you plan on playing in tournaments. Booster drafts are a fun way of getting around the expense issue, though - everyone buys a few booster packs and players take turns drafting cards from each booster to create and play a deck with, keeping the cards they draft.

What is not so obvious is the series of steps involved in getting the data into a format which allows you to explore the data. You may be in possession of a dataset in CSV format (short for comma-separated values) but no idea what to do next. This post will help you get started in data science by allowing you to load your CSV file into Colab.
